WKU Grad from National Institute of Health Is 1991 Lancaster Lecturer

A Western Kentucky University graduate and expert on immunology and AIDS will be the L.Y. Lancaster Distinguished Lecturer of 1991.

Dr. Gene M. Shearer of the National Institute of Health will lecture on "AIDS: Perspectives from a Researcher" Friday, Nov. 1 at 6 p.m. in the Downing University Center, room 305.

There will be a reception at 5 p.m. in room 226. The reception and lecture are open to the public.

A dinner for Dr. Shearer, L. Y. Lancaster Society Members and invited guests will follow the lecture at 7:15 p.m.

At 1:15 p.m. Friday, Shearer will interview with WKYU-FM Radio News for delayed broadcasts. He will speak to Biology faculty and students at 2:15 p.m.

Shearer is Chief of the Cell

Mediated Immunity Section in the Experimental Immunity Branch of the National Cancer Institute, National Institute of Health located at Bethesda, Maryland. He received his bachelors degree in Biology and Chemistry from WKU in 1961 and Ph.D in Radiation Biology in 1967 from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. He did post-doctoral work at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, New York and at the Weizman Institute of Science in Israel. He joined the staff at NIH in 1972.

Dr. Shearer is a member of the American Association of Immunologists, The Clinical Immunology Society and The American Association for Laboratory Science.

His numerous awards include the Damon Runyon Memorial Cancer Fund Postdoctoral Fellowship in 1968, the American Cancer Society Postdoctoral Fellowship in 1969, the Senior Weizmann Research Fellowship in 1971, the NIH Director's Award in 1978, the Merit Pay Award in 1983 and Senior Executive Awards, 1986 and 1988.

Dr. Meredith Among 13 Candidates for Central Florida President

President Thomas C. Meredith is one of 13 remaining candidates for the top position at the University of Central Florida in Orlando.

Dr. Meredith's candidacy was announced in a Louisville Courier-Journal story Oct. 15.

He was among a list of 33 out of 142 candidates who had applied or been nominated to head the school which has an enrollment of 21,500.

Candidates are interviewing in Florida this week, and five finalists will be named Oct. 31.

Dr. Meredith said he did not apply for the position, but was invited to be a candidate.

"I love being at Western Kentucky University and in Bowling Green, and I love being back in Kentucky. My candidacy in no way reflects on the wonderful students and outstanding faculty and staff here," he said.

A presidential search advisory council recommended names to Florida's state Board of Regents who narrowed the list to 13.

The Board of Regents, which governs Florida's nine state universities, hopes to name a president by Dec. 4.

Dr. L.Y. Lancaster was known as the father of Western's pre-medical program, preparing students for 37 years.

University Places Freeze on Jobs, Purchases

Anticipating a significant reduction in state funding, President Meredith has announced a freeze on all vacant positions and purchase of equipment over $300.

In a memorandum to vice presidents, deans, directors and department heads last week, Dr. Meredith said, "I regret the necessity of implementing these two policies, and I hope the freezes can be reevaluated soon.

"We will implement an appeals procedure to provide an opportunity for consideration of exceptions to the policies."

Dr. Meredith said the amount of WKU's budget cut won't be known until Nov. 4 when the Council on Higher Education meets.

"We are speculating that our portion of the $30 million cut for higher education will be between $2 million and $2.4 million," he said.

Regents Present Position Paper

Chairman of the University Board of Regents Joseph Iracane presented the position paper announced at the Oct. 8 Board meeting at a news conference on campus last Wednesday. The following is the text.

STATUS OF THE MISSION

Western Kentucky University's Board of Regents is committed to continuing Western's tradition of quality, excellence and efficiency. Consequently in 1990, the Board initiated a comprehensive planning project based on the Shirley Model which was later converted into Western XXI. This planning study was undertaken as an objective way to provide direction and vision for the University as it moves into the 21st century.

All areas of the university—faculty, staff and board—had input into this effort which took over a year to complete.

The result was a planning document that created vision for the university and established priorities so that the dollars the University spends will provide the greatest possible return.

Western's commitment to teaching and learning are emphasized in Western XXI. The report also contains academic program recommendations that call for enhancing, strengthening, maintaining or de-emphasizing each area. In the support services areas, action recommendations are identical to those for academic programs except "review" was added as one of the possible recommendations. Dr. Thomas Meredith was directed to use Western XXI as his policy guide in making the University more cost effective.

MISSION STATEMENT

Western has a rich and enviable tradition in providing higher education for the people of Kentucky. In over eighty years of service to the state Western has made a dramatic mark as an institution of opportunity and excellence. By design, Western has mapped its course as a special sanctuary of higher learning, an institution committed to the expansion of knowledge, and a refuge for study and intellectual development. Western has sought to combine the theoretical with the practical and to imbue the young men and women of the state with a love of learning and an appreciation for the practical affairs of the state.

Western's overall mission and goals cannot be in doubt. The institution's philosophy has been clearly enunciated throughout the administrations of the various presidents, and the Board of Regents over the years has been consistent in its judgments regarding the policies for advancement of the Western ideals.

From time-to-time, however, this mission bears repeating and reasserting for all to understand and appreciate. The mission may be succinctly summarized as follows:

(1) To foster a desire and recognition of the value of knowledge and learning for its own sake and to understand that the primary feature of a great society is its intellectual development.

(2) To provide opportunity to all the persons of the state who are able and have the innate capacity to benefit from higher education.

(3) To provide excellence in scholarship and to ensure the highest quality of higher education to the people of Kentucky.

(4) To always seek the truth through the expansion of the spectrum of knowledge and to be sensitive to encroachments which would reduce the liberty to learn.

(5) To join liberal learning with an appreciation for the ethical value of hard work and by example and practice convey to the students the importance value of rigor and perseverance in their lifetime pursuits.

(6) To conduct research and convey knowledge to bring the intellectual power of the faculty and the students to bear on the profound problems of our society.

(7) To expand the borders of the campus to reach every family of our region of Kentucky and to bestow the beneficial effects of the University upon each.

(8) To provide service to the people of the state in their everyday life through outreach programs to resolve social problems through the application of research and learning.

(9) To operate as effectively and efficiently as possible in the use of the taxpayers resources in providing public higher education.

Both history and tradition bear testimony to Western's eminence and considerable record of achievement of these goals.

However, the Board of Regents, as the embodiment of authority of the people of Kentucky, must be constantly vigilant to safeguard and protect the advancement of these ideals. The Board of Regents in shaping policy for the University must show the way and steer a course sensitive to these principles. To diminish excellence, to depart from broad based opportunity, to constrict knowledge, or to fail to be accountable to the public violates the compact and principles of which Western is founded.

The successive administrations of this institution have never deviated from the general path of this mission. In recent history, the administration of Dr. Kelly Thompson molded the pattern of a great and expansive University and Dr. Dero Downing maintained a course straight and true through a period of generational revolution from which Western emerged a stronger institution. Dr. Donald Zacharias adhered to the institutional tradition of excellence by raising academic standards and thereby elevated the University to a new level of eminence and respect in the academic community. Dr. Kern Alexander made sweeping innovations that greatly increased educational opportunity through dramatic increases in enrollment while recruiting a more academically talented student body. All of these administrations were able to achieve and maintain quality through cost-effective operation and budgeting practices.

Lately, Western has reaped the benefits of these policies. The growth policy of the University has coincided with an increase in state-wide revenues for education with the result that during the past biennium Western has had a much more adequate revenue base than at any time since the 1970's.

Today, under the leadership of Dr. Thomas Meredith, we seek to continue this tradition of quality, excellence and efficiency. In this pursuit, the Board of Regents envisages certain pathways and guide posts which will contribute to these ends. The objective of the Board of Regents is to make the most beneficial use of the newfound fiscal resources and to seize the opportunity to direct our initiatives to the quality improvement of programs and services of the University while, at the same time, improving the efficiency of the administrative operation.

In this light we suggest a policy direction that will concentrate resources in the following areas:

First. The fiscal resources of the University must be concentrated in such a manner as to improve the quality of the academic programs. Costs associated with improvement of instruction must be addressed in a manner to best facilitate the instructional relationship between the professor and the student. We must have evidence to show to the public that instruction has been enhanced and that the increased public investment in Western has benefited the student directly through improved instruction.

Second. Evaluation of the instructional program must confirm that the type of educational programs being offered at Western are most appropriate and beneficial to the student in the rapidly changing world of which we are a part. Are our fiscal resources expended on instructional programs that enhance substantive knowledge, enabling the Western graduate to pursue graduate study, or provide for the student an economically productive career? Is our curriculum in keeping with the time? Such an evaluation is essential to the future strength of Western as an institution and to each student, respectively.

Third. Are resources properly balanced between the arts and the sciences, liberal and professional learning, the quantitative and the qualitative? Are we sufficiently grounded in general education and is there an integrated plan of instruction at the undergraduate level which is supported by the state revenues as reflected in the budget of the University? It is vital and essential that we have evidence of internal funding that supports courses and programs of study that are crucial to the fabric of an academic program of excellence. It must be shown that the flow of fiscal resources nourish the advancement of language, art, history, and political science, natural science, mathematics, ethics, philosophy as well as vocational, technical and professional training. This is a requirement that must be accommodated administratively, instructionally, and financially.

Fourth. A program of graduate studies must be planned and implemented which is expansive in view and innovative in spirit. Our students must be exposed to an educational program which will enable them to meet the new requirements of specialized knowledge in a global marketplace. The programs must reflect the skills of necessity as summarized by Robert Reich in his recent book, The Work of Nations; skills as problem-solvers and problem-identifiers. Are our graduate programs fashioned to produce the entrepreneurial and professional skills of a new multinational economic and social environment? New programs of study should be forth-coming from the faculty and the administration to place Western's graduates in the forefront of this modern society.

Fifth. We, as an institution of higher education, must continue to expand our pursuit of new knowledge through research and inquiry. Faculty should have the time and resources and to have sufficient laboratory facilities, materials, and documents to conduct research and to encourage students to do the same.

Sixth. We must contain the costs of non-instructional and non-academic activities of the University. The era that we now enjoy of reasonably adequate funding will hopefully continue, but reality and experience suggest that revenues will not always be adequate. With this in mind, we must hone our administrative activities and overhead down to the most essential and cost efficient levels possible. We cannot afford the luxury of inefficient services within the University.

Moreover, we should take counsel from the business community of the nation which has only recently discovered that excessive bureaucracy results in a waste of resources and ineffective operation. The University, as a business, is most effective and efficient when the layers of bureaucracy are reduced and the front-line workers are given greater autonomy. In our case, it is most important that our efforts to enhance the academic programs are the product of the thoughtful efforts of faculty, department heads, deans and whenever possible students in conjunction with the central administration.

Seventh. Development, the acquisition of private funds, has in recent years become a vital part of every institution of higher education. Private funds provide the financial edge which distinguishes mediocre from outstanding institutions. Western has made some strides in this area, but today it is in drastic need of new ideas, a new plan, and a more aggressive spirit. We must act assertively and competitively in this arena.

Finally, I would summarize by saying that our mission is well enunciated and our goals are legibly marked. We are at a propitious time in our history; a time when we can with the appropriate innovative purpose make great strides in the advancement of this University. We now have the resources to seriously consider options that were beyond our reach a few years before. We plan our path with due regard for excellence in instruction, expansion of access, and opportunity and efficiency in management. We must move quickly and deliberately to seize the day.

Phonathon Raises Record $166,145

The Alumni Annual Fund-Student Phonathon ended Oct. 10 with a record $166,145 in pledges.

More than 600 WKU students telephoned alumni for four weeks seeking support for the University's academic programs.

Last year students raised $143,500.

Public Radio Service Drive Nov. 2-9

On-air fund-raising efforts for WKU's Public Radio Service annual membership drive will be Nov. 2-9.

"Membership drives increase listener support for public radio and help to continue a high level of programming," David Wilkinson, director of public radio, said.

"Public radio provides many alternative programs not available elsewhere."

Funds raised will be used to purchase programming for the non-commercial stations and for other essential operation expenses. Regional chairpersons will assist the public radio staff in the drive.

During the broadcast Thursday night, Nov. 7, a report from the regional drives will be given.

The Public Radio Service of Western Kentucky University, the largest public radio service in Kentucky, covers over 60 percent of the state. WKYU-88.9 FM, a 100,000-watt facility, began operations in 1980. Repeater station WDCL-89.7 FM began operations in Somerset, Ky in 1985. In 1990, repeater stations WKPB-89.5 FM in Henderson and WKUE-90.9 FM in Elizabethtown expanded the system.

SPJ To Establish Moscow State Chapter

The Dean of the Moscow State University School of Journalism, Professor Yassen Zassoursky, will meet with the Society of Professional Journalists at WKU Monday, Nov. 4.

There will be a press conference at 2 p.m. to officially announce the formation of the Soviet SPJ chapter, the first free-will professional organization for journalists in the Soviet Union. The Moscow State chapter will be the first SPJ chapter outside the United States.

There will also be a luncheon; faculty are invited to attend. For more information, contact Chris Poynter at 6288.

Employee Dependent Grant Program Is Success In First Semester

The Employee Dependent Child Grant Program, implemented by President Meredith, began this fall and has been a success, according to Michael Dale, personnel services director.

Approximately 96 grants have been given for the fall semester. These grants provide for up to 50 percent of in-state tuition and regular fees for dependent children of full-time faculty and staff.

"There definitely will be interest in the grant program in the future," Dale predicts. "The interest would depend on the number of faculty and staff having dependent children attending the University," he says.

Tuition waivers such as these are used as tools to recruit faculty and staff, he says.

"Recruiting is sometimes competitive by nature. It provides an added benefit for potential faculty and staff," Dale said.

In future semesters, forms are to be completed and returned to the Department of Personnel Services. For more information, call 2071.

Office of the President

President Thomas C. Meredith will serve a two-year term as convener of presidents of the eight regional public universities in the Commonwealth, effective July 1, 1991.

Dr. Rex F. Galloway, Management Head, Attracted to WKU's Accreditation

By Carol Overby

The former dean of the College of Business at Austin Peay State University is the new head of the Department of Management.

Dr. Rex F. Galloway, who was also on the faculty at Murray State University for more than 17 years, assumed the new position July 1. It is the first time the position has been available, since the Department of Management and Marketing recently became two separate departments.

"I'm very much impressed by Western," Galloway said. "I was very much impressed by the faculty and administration of the college, at Austin Peay State University.

According to Galloway, one reason Western appealed to him was that its College of Business Administration is accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business. "AACSB is a very distinguishing mark for a school of business," he said. "My desire was to get back into a school that held AACSB accreditation and whose administration supported the philosophy of holding such accreditation. So, it was attractive to me to come to Western, because number one, it was accredited and number two, I had the desire to get back into the Kentucky system."

Galloway's plans for the

management department include increasing community visibility.

"It is a good school, and they're doing some good things," he said. "We want to continue with that, but we'll want to expand some things and be visible in the community. I'm hoping we'll become more visible as a department, and I'll hopefully be able to take a lead in that.

"I saw (the move to Western) as an opportunity to get back into the Kentucky system and achieve growth myself, and by being here I feel I will grow as well."

Dr. Melvin Borland, Economics, Named to KERA Testing Group

Dr. Melvin Borland, professor of economics, has been appointed to a technical advisory committee to help develop testing as required by the Kentucky Education Reform Act.

He is one of three university educators from Kentucky serving on the committee for the Kentucky Instructional Results Information Systems' student assessment. The committee, appointed through the Kentucky State Department of Education, will assist Advance Systems Inc. in developing the various testing measures that will be used to assess educational attainment in Kentucky schools.

Dr. Borland said the committee will provide the expertise Advance Systems needs to develop the complex testing required by KERA.

"Testing is a big issue," he said. "There are a lot of technical questions to be answered."

The committee includes educators from the University of Kentucky, Northwestern and Stanford universities and officials from several Kentucky public school districts and the state Department of Education.

"This appointment will allow Dr. Borland to shape the nature of the tests used to assess progress in our public schools and to bring his expertise to bear on crucial educational issues," said Dr. John Wassom, head of the University's Department of Economics.

Potter College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences

DEPARTMENT OF JOURNALISM

Dr. Corban Goble presented "Mark Twain's Nemesis: The Paige Compositor," at the 7th annual Ohio Valley History Conference at Richmond Oct. 11.

DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

Dr. Michael Kallstrom will perform an original composition for voice, electronic tape and videotape for the Society for Electro-Acoustic Music in the U.S. tomorrow at the University of Illinois.

President's Message For United Way

Our 1992 United Way Campaign is now under way. I want to thank Dr. John O'Connor, Department Head in Psychology, for giving of his time and talent to lead our effort at the University.

So many of our lives and those with whom we work are touched by the services offered by the wide variety of United Way agencies in south central Kentucky. It is sometimes easy to assume that someone else is taking care of the deceptively large number of individuals who are going through misfortunes or problems that may very well be beyond their control. As a society, we all share in each other's problems in one way or another.

It sometimes slips our attention that problems exist here. For example, 5,215 families live in poverty in Warren County, 1,656 households were headed by single parents struggling to make ends meet, the Rape Crisis and Prevention Center experienced a 75 percent increase in crisis calls from victims of sexual assault, and 40 percent of the children in the Bowling Green school system qualified for free or reduced lunches.

Let me encourage you to be involved in the United Way as you see fit. I hope that as an educational institution, we will demonstrate our understanding and compassion in a meaningful way.

New Math Head, Dr. James Porter, Hopes To Expand Research and Outreach

By Carol Overby

Dr. James Porter, a native of Coshocton, Ohio, and the new head of the Department of Mathematics, is now making Bowling Green his home after spending the last eight years at the University of Mississippi.

Prior to his position at the University of Mississippi, he spent 12 years at the University of Arkansas.

"I've been busy getting adjusted to the department and its resources," he said. "I hope to continue the things the department has been doing and perhaps add some improvements."

According to Porter, one of the big projects the math department is working on involves increasing its supply and use of computers, a revolution that is taking place in the field of mathematics.

"Mostly we plan to expand on the activities we're already doing," he said. "We are interested in research projects and outreach to secondary and elementary school teachers and teacher training. We also have a large service and teaching responsibility that the department takes quite seriously."

"It's a pleasure to step into a department that is so well-organized," Porter added. "The faculty have been very helpful to me. They make my job easy."

Porter received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Ohio State University, followed by his doctorate from Syracuse University in 1971. His mathematics speciality is functional analysis, a theory that is used in physics and engineering. He is a member of both the Math Association of America and the American Math Society.

He and his wife, Mary Ann, are now making their home in Bowling Green, while his son Matt, 22, is majoring in music at Ole Miss.

Porter said he appreciates the good leadership and congenial atmosphere found at WKU.

"I've been very impressed with Western," he said. "Everyone works hard, and everyone is enthusiastic about the future of the University."

Sponsored Awards

Dr. John Faine, Sociology and Anthropology, $10,000 from the Kentucky State Police for DARE Evaluation. WKU will conduct an evaluation of the DARE program in its several dimensions as the program is delivered during the 1991-92 school year.

Dr. Stephen House, Institute for Economic Development and Public Services, $100,000 from the U.S. Department of Commerce for University Center Program. This is a continuation grant from the Economic Development Administration. Major functions are public economic development assistance, regional economic forecasting, transfer of technology, regional leadership development, and the overall support of the Institute for Economic Development at Western. Also, $10,000 from the Tennessee Valley Authority has been awarded to the Institute to provide an economic analysis and forecasting for the western region of Kentucky.

Dr. Kenneth Mussnug, Center for Industry and Technology, $79,434 from Bluegrass State Skills Corporation for industrial training at area industries.

Larry Scott, Library Special Collections, $5,573 from the Institute of Museum Services to fund a general conservation survey at the Kentucky Museum.

Dr. Vickie Stayton, Teacher Education, $78,658 from the U.S. Department of Education for PREPARE Personnel in Early Intervention to implement a competency-based personnel preparation program at the master's level to prepare personnel to work with children ages 3-5 who are disabled and their families.

Terry Wilson, Center for Math, Science and Environmental Education, $5000 from the Tennessee Valley Authority for TVA Base to provide workshops for educators and citizens within the center's service area on water quality, waste management, energy use and soil conservation.

Dr. Richard Wilson, Department of Health and Safety, $197,850 from the U.S. Department of Education for Drug Free Schools - Training School Personnel to address the drug abuse education needs of special education students. An analysis of drug education materials to determine how they could be adapted for special education students will be done along with an analysis of school-wide prevention programs to identify ways of more effectively including special education students. Workshops and in-service programs will be conducted for school personnel. (See story, next column).

Hot Off The Press

Nezam Iraniparast, Department of Mathematics, will have "A Method of Solving a Class of CIV Boundary Value Problems" published in the Canadian Mathematical Bulletin.

Dr. H. Youn Kim, Department of Economics, had his article, "The Translog Production Function and Variable Returns to Scale," accepted for future publication by The Review of Economics And Statistics.

Dr. Afzalur Rahim, Department of Management, published Chapter 9, "Impression Management and Organizational Conflict," with Dr. Buntzman in Applied Impression Management: How Image-Making Affects Managerial Decisions (pp. 157-174), edited by Dr. R. Giacalone and Dr. P. Rosenfeld and published by Sage Publication, Newbury, CA, 1991.

Dr. Afzal Rahim, Department of Management, published Theory and Research on Conflict Management (New York: Praeger Publishers, 1990.)

Dr. Thomas R. Syre, Department of Public Health, "Administrators Play Key Role in Curing Alcoholic Staffers," Modern Healthcare, Sept. 30, 1991 issue.

U.S. Dept. of Ed. Awards WKU $197,850 for Drug Abuse Prevention Program

"Special and Drug Free", a project to study school-based drug abuse prevention as it impacts special education students, has been made possible by a $197,850 grant awarded to WKU by the U. S. Department of Education.

The project, directed by Dr. Richard W. Wilson of the Department of Public Health, began Oct. 1. The project will review drug education curricula and other preventive activities to determine how well they serve learning impaired children in grades K-12.

"We've recognized that learning impaired youngsters are at an increased risk for problems with alcohol and other drugs," Wilson said. "Even though almost every school has a drug abuse prevention program, the unique needs in this regard of special education students have been largely unaddressed by the local, state and federal education agencies."

Recommendations and guidelines will be distributed and communicated around the country as a result of the project. Curricular materials will be developed specifically for special education teachers to use in their drug abuse prevention work. Workshops and in-service programs will be conducted throughout Kentucky.

Information Center Celebrates First Year

Celebrating its first year of operation this October is the WKU Information Center, the renovated house located at the corner of University Blvd. and Normal Drive.

The Information Center has served nearly 2000 visitors since October of 1990. It provides the community, visitors and guests with general information on WKU and Bowling Green.

It is stocked with maps, brochures, admission applications, financial aid forms, housing applications and schedule bulletins. Also available are the WKU yearbook video and books on WKU history.

Staffed by students, alumni and volunteers, the center is open 9 a.m. - 6 p.m. weekdays, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Saturdays and 1 - 5 p.m. Sundays.

Ky. Museum Textile Quilted by Former WKU Faculty Elizabeth Woods

The Kentucky Museum is featuring a quilt made by Elizabeth M. "Bethie" Woods as the October Textile of the Month.

Woods, a Mississippi native, was a long-time resident of Bowling Green. She joined the faculty of Western State Normal School (now WKU) in 1911 and taught Spanish, German and French. She also worked on campus landscaping projects, including a formal garden on the grounds of the Kentucky Building.

The quilt, donated by Wood's niece, Mildred Potter Lissauer, of Louisville, is a variation of the traditional ninepatch pattern. It combines blocks of pink and white squares pieced to resemble a checkerboard and unpieced white fabric, creating a diagonal effect similar to the Irish Chain pattern.

The Kentucky Museum's hours are 9:30 a.m. - 4 p.m. Tuesday-Friday and 1 - 4:30 p.m. on Sundays. Admission is free for Kentucky Museum Associates and WKU faculty, staff and students with appropriate ID. Cost of admission for museum visitors are $1 for children 6 - 18, $2 for adults and $5 for families.

For more information, contact Earlene Chelf, special events coordinator, at 5263.

Gallery Features Printmaking

The Ivan Wilson Center for Fine Arts Gallery will feature three printmakers from the Hooper Foundation Oct. 23 - Nov. 13.

Lars Bo, born in Denmark, studied etching techniques and book illustrations. He received first prize for engraving at the Biennial of Paris in 1959 and first prize for the best illustrated book in Copenhagen, Denmark in 1960.

Warrington Colescott's work has achieved international recognition in Europe and the United States. His work has been acquired by the Museum of Modern Art, Library of Congress and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Gail Singer's work is owned by private collectors and the Library of Congress. She was represented through one-woman shows from Paris to St. Louis, Missouri.

The Hooper Foundation, a non-profit organization, is based in Manitowac, Wisconsin. It awards scholarships to art and business students and sponsors exhibitions for the community.

A reception will be held Wednesday, Oct. 23 at noon. Professor Ivan Schieferdecker will discuss the techniques of intaglio printmaking and the methods of Warrington Colescott at 3:30 p.m.

Gallery hours are 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Real Estate Commission Gives to WKU

Western Kentucky University has received grants of more than $22,000 from the Kentucky Real Estate Commission to help support business education through WKU's Community College.

Neal Turner, president of the Kentucky Real Estate Commission, presented a $21,135 check to President Meredith and Dr. Richard Ayres, head of the business division of the Community College, to support business education programs.

Turner also presented a $1000 check for a scholarship award to the business division.
